ON SAD WORDS, AND FAITH

Copyright 2015 By John B. Reynolds (john@jrwrites.com)

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.'" John Greenleaf Whittier. The passage comes near the end of his poem "Maud Muller" about a peasant girl who meets a judge from the local town one day when she is out working in the fields and he is passing by on horseback. The actual encounter occurs when he asks her for a drink of water and she fills her cup for him from a nearby stream. Secretly, she falls for him in the moment ("Maud Muller looked and sighed: 'Ah me! / That I the Judge's bride might be'"). Secretly, he falls for her at the same time ("Would she were mine, and I to-day / Like her, a harvester of hay"). The thoughts go unspoken, though. He marries in time a rich woman enamored of fashion. Maud Muller marries in time a poor farmer, but through the years Maud Muller and the Judge both recall that day in the fields, and wonder how things may have played out differently, setting up Whittier's sad, ponderous conclusion.

We find such a conclusion in today's Gospel as well. Here, Jesus has just returned to Nazareth after performing a series of miracles--cleansing lepers, curing Simon's mother-in-law, restoring a paralytic and a man with a withered hand to full health, calming the storms at sea, bringing Jairus's deceased twelve year old daughter back to life--throughout the surrounding area. But the locals do not receive him well. When he preaches in the synagogue, they respond, "Where did this man get all this? What kind of wisdom has been given him? What mighty deeds are wrought by his hands? Is this not the carpenter, the son of Mary..." They actually take offence at him, and in response to their skepticism, Jesus replies, "A prophet is not without honor except in his native place and among his own kin..." Accordingly per the Gospel, "he was not able to perform any mighty deed there," setting up another sad, ponderous conclusion: "He was amazed at their lack of faith."

It's a funny thing, faith. We all say we have it, but do we? Really? Jesus himself tells us, "If you have faith the size of a mustard seed, you will say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there,' and it will move. Nothing will be impossible for you." I haven't moved any mountains lately; how about you? Joel Osteen tells the story of a church pastor who, when he brings the flock together to pray for desperately needed rain, asks people of the congregation to bring articles of faith to the rally in demonstration of their belief. Most people bring crosses and prayer books and bibles, and when the rain finally comes, these people raise their bibles and such. One little girl's article of faith far outshines the rest, though. She brings an umbrella. Cute. And deeply ponderous in its own way. But from a joyful/hopeful perspective. Perhaps Maud Muller and the Judge let fear and unbelief doom them to lives of what-might-have-been. We all know fear and unbelief. I'm dealing with some right now, in fact. But Osteen says it's all pretty simple: if you're going to pray for rain, bring your umbrella. Got faith? C'mon. Let's go move some mountains.

LIVING GOD'S WORD

We pray that when we gather on Sundays we know ourselves as the family of Jesus, striving to hear the word of God and keep it. We pray that we might recognize in others the brothers and sisters of the Lord, the beloved children of God.

GOD'S WORD TODAY

Today's second reading gives us a remarkable example of what the life of faith is all about. Saint Paul tells the Corinthians that he was given a "thorn in the flesh." Scripture scholars have debated just what this "thorn" really was. Perhaps it is best that we do not know exactly, for each of us has our own "thorn in the flesh." It may be chronic illness, a fractured relationship, deep disappointment, unemployment, or any number of things. It is Paul's attitude that we are called to emulate. When we are tempted to groan or complain about our own "thorns in the flesh," let us remember that it is in weakness that we are made strong. This is a central paradox of the Christian life, one that is difficult to live. May Saint Paul intercede on our behalf so that we will be strengthened in faith, even in our weakness. ### FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST

Mark's Gospel account today is built on a double astonishment or amazement: the neighbors and family of Jesus are astonished that he taught in the synagogue with wisdom and worked powerful signs. Jesus, in turn, is amazed that they have no faith in him because they know his origins, not because of any fault with his teaching or ministry. As with many of Mark's passages, we get a rather intimate glimpse here of the human part of Jesus' two-fold nature. To reinforce his point, Mark tells of Jesus' return to his native place, and further points out that he is in the midst of his own family members there. From the very people he expected the most, Jesus received the least. In the day of the Gospel's writing, Mark was attempting to illustrate a lesson to the house of Israel: the God of the covenant expected the greatest faith from the house of Israel, but often received the least. This is a good source for reflection on our part, we who are Jesus' followers today. For the wisdom of Christ to continue and for our lives to be seen as signs of his power, he must expect and be able to find great faith among us. Will he? Can he? Does he? Or is he, once again, amazed by its absence? Copyright (c) J. S. Paluch Co.

STATEMENT OF ARCHBISHOP BLASE J. CUPICH
ARCHBISHOP OF CHICAGO
June 28, 2015

This week the Supreme Court of the United States issued two rulings with particular meaning for the Catholic Church.

In the first, the Court preserved subsidies for the 6.4 million low-income Americans who depend on them to purchase health insurance under the Affordable Care Act. We have issues with provisions of that legislation and will continue to advocate to preserve our religious freedom. However, we understand that for millions of individuals and families, most of them the working poor, this decision preserves access to health care and the promise it offers of a healthier, longer life.

In the second decision, the United States Supreme Court has ruled that two persons of the same sex have a constitutional right to marry each other. In doing so, the Court has re-defined civil marriage. The proposed reason for the ruling is the protection of equal rights for all citizens, including those who identify themselves as gay. The rapid social changes signaled by the Court ruling call us to mature and serene reflections as we move forward together. In that process, the Catholic Church will stand ready to offer a wisdom rooted in faith and a wide range of human experience.

It is important to note that the Catholic Church has an abiding concern for the dignity of gay persons. In fact, the Catechism of the Catholic Church says: "They must be accepted with respect, compassion, and sensitivity. Every sign of unjust discrimination in their regard should be avoided." (n. 2358). This respect must be real, not rhetorical, and ever reflective of the Church's commitment to accompanying all people. For this reason, the Church must extend support to all families, no matter their circumstances, recognizing that we are all relatives, journeying through life under the careful watch of a loving God.

It is also important to stress that the Supreme Court's redefinition of civil marriage has no bearing on the Catholic Sacrament of Matrimony, in which the marriage of man and woman is a sign of the union of Christ and the Church. In upholding our traditional concept of marriage, we are called to support those who have entered into this sacred and loving bond with God and each other.

This will be especially important for the members of our own Church as we walk together, respectful not only of the political demands of equality, but above all else, guided by the higher claims of divine revelation. Our aim in all of this will be to hold fast to an authentic understanding of marriage which has been written in the human heart, consolidated in history, and confirmed by the Word of God.
